WHAT IS AN INTERFACE MADE OF?

We're not designing pages, we're designing systems of components.

THESE THINGS ARE GREAT, BUT...

FRAMEWORK POTENTIAL PITFALLS

- One-size-fits-all
- Lookalike issues
- Potential for bloat/unneeded stuff
- Might not do everything you need
- Subscribe to someone else's structure, naming, style

Responsive deliverables should look a lot like fully-functioning Twitter Bootstrap-style systems custom tailored for your clients' needs.

BENEFITS OF FRONT-END STYLE GUIDES

- Promotes consistency and cohesion
- Easier to test
- Better workflow
- Creates a shared vocabulary
- Useful reference
- Future-friendly foundation

Pattern Library

The MailChimp Pattern Library is a byproduct of our move to a responsive, nimble, and intuitive app. Constant iteration requires both an efficient workflow and a well defined collection of atomic elements that can assemble new UIs quickly without accruing new technical or design debt.

We're also solving an internal communication problem by documenting and assembling a reference site of our patterns. A common lexicon of code and UI elements benefits us in a few ways:

- We can build consistently and focus on workflows and logic, not web forms and list items
- We can reuse code instead of roping in a developer
- We can maintain our code by seeing our patterns in one place, define elements in our application, and keep redundancy to a minimum

We guard our pattern library jealously, and add new patterns only when the case for doing so is sound. New patterns come at a high cost—they require new design elements, additional code, maintenance, and they increase the cognitive load on users.

Our pattern library is both a learning tool and a compass that corrects our course as we build new things. We share our work here to help others on a similar path.

yelp Styleguide

Have you used the styleguide today?

The styleguide is a resource for designers, product managers, and developers, providing a common language around Yelp's UI patterns. We use it to maintain modular front-end code and visual consistency across the web app.

Learn about why and how we made the styleguide over on the Engineering Blog.

MO' PATTERNS, MO' PROBLEMS

- Time consuming to create
- Treated as a auxiliary project
- Often too abstract
- Seen only as a designer/developer tool
- Often created after a project launches
- Lacking a clear methodology

pattern lab
create design systems with atomic design

DAVE OLSEN
@dmolsen

WHAT PATTERN LAB IS

- A design system builder
- Your comprehensive interface design system
- A style guide starter kit
- A design toolkit (viewport resizer and other tools)

WHAT PATTERN LAB AIN'T

- A UI framework
- Language, library, style, workflow dependent
- Incredibly rigid
- "Just" a pattern library, but also not a CMS site generator

As an industry, we sell websites like paintings. Instead, we should be selling beautiful and easy access to content, agnostic of device, screen size, or context.

October 07, 2013

I recently received this email from a startup:

> We're a startup in San Francisco looking to launch a 5-page website this October. We would deliver all wireframes, web content, and design PSDs. We just need a front-end pro to develop the site. While the site is straightforward, we do have high dev requirements:
> - lightweight site that loads quickly
> - use HTML+CSS, only use JS when absolutely needed
> - entire site to be coded using Bootstrap3

Interface Inventory

Many are familiar with the concept of a content inventory. Content audits are usually performed in the early stages of a website redesign process to take stock of all a site's content. It's a tedious process involving spreadsheets and caffeine, but the hard work pays off. You end up all your content laid out on the table, which gives you a new perspective on what your content is and how to tackle it.

Enter the interface inventory.

An interface inventory is similar to a content inventory, only instead of sifting through and categorizing content, you're taking stock and categorizing the components making up your website, app, intranet, hoobadyboop, or whatever (it doesn't matter). An interface inventory is a comprehensive collection of the bits and pieces that make up your interface.

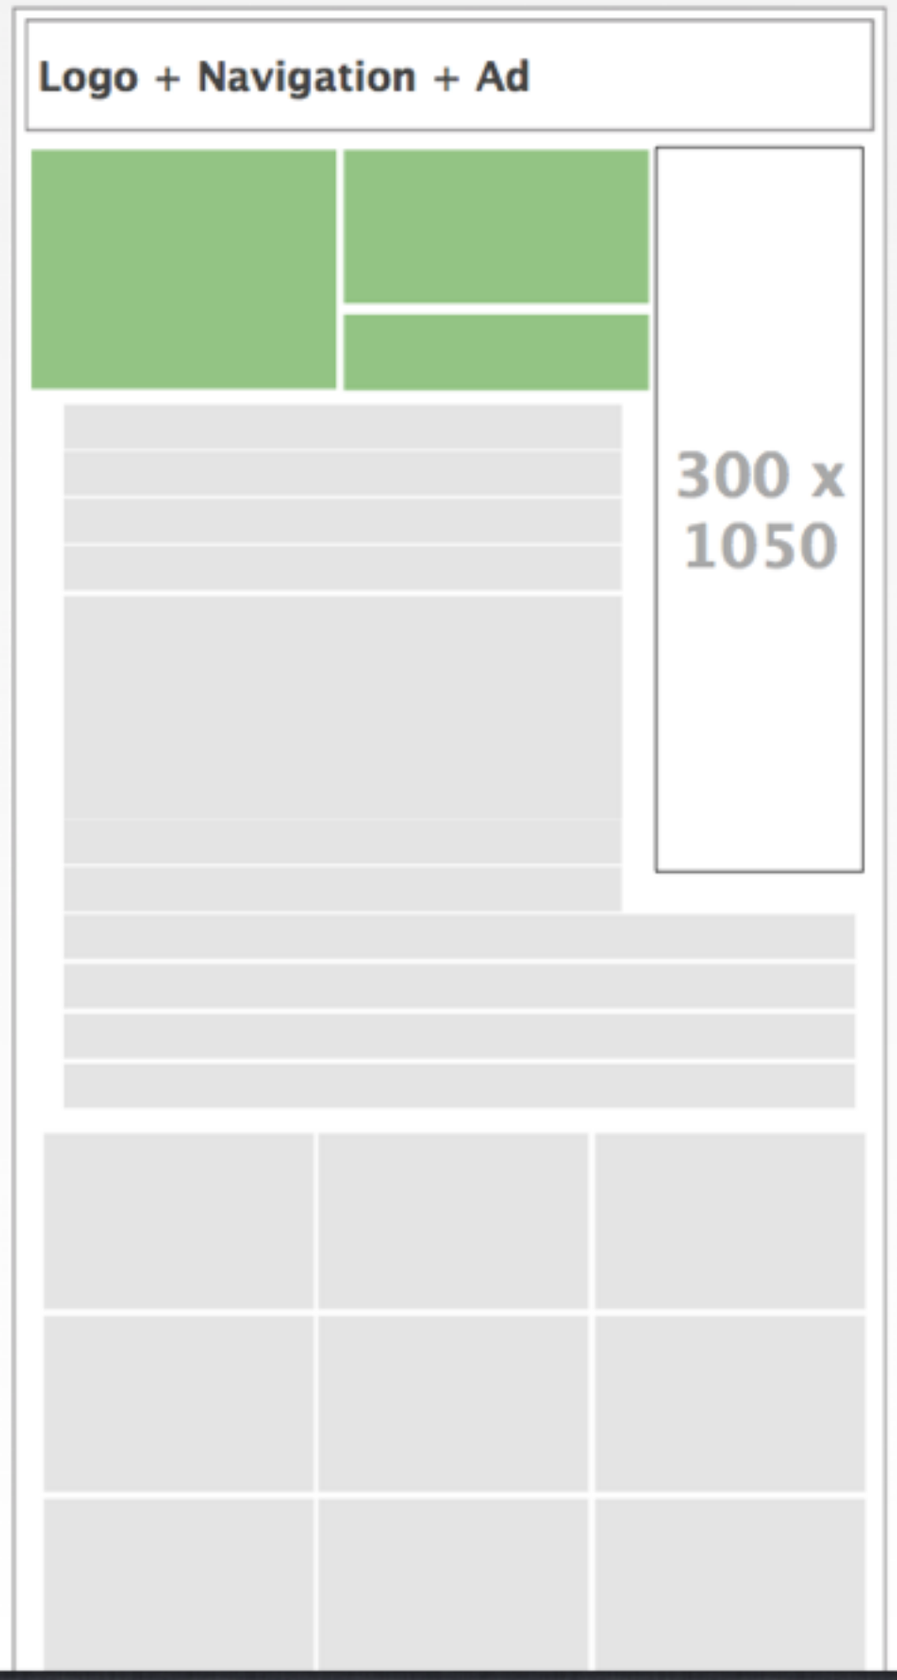
Site-Wide Patterns: Featured Island



Featured Island

What
The Featured Island is a block of content curated by the editors. It should accommodate a video, a headline without an image, or a headline with an image.

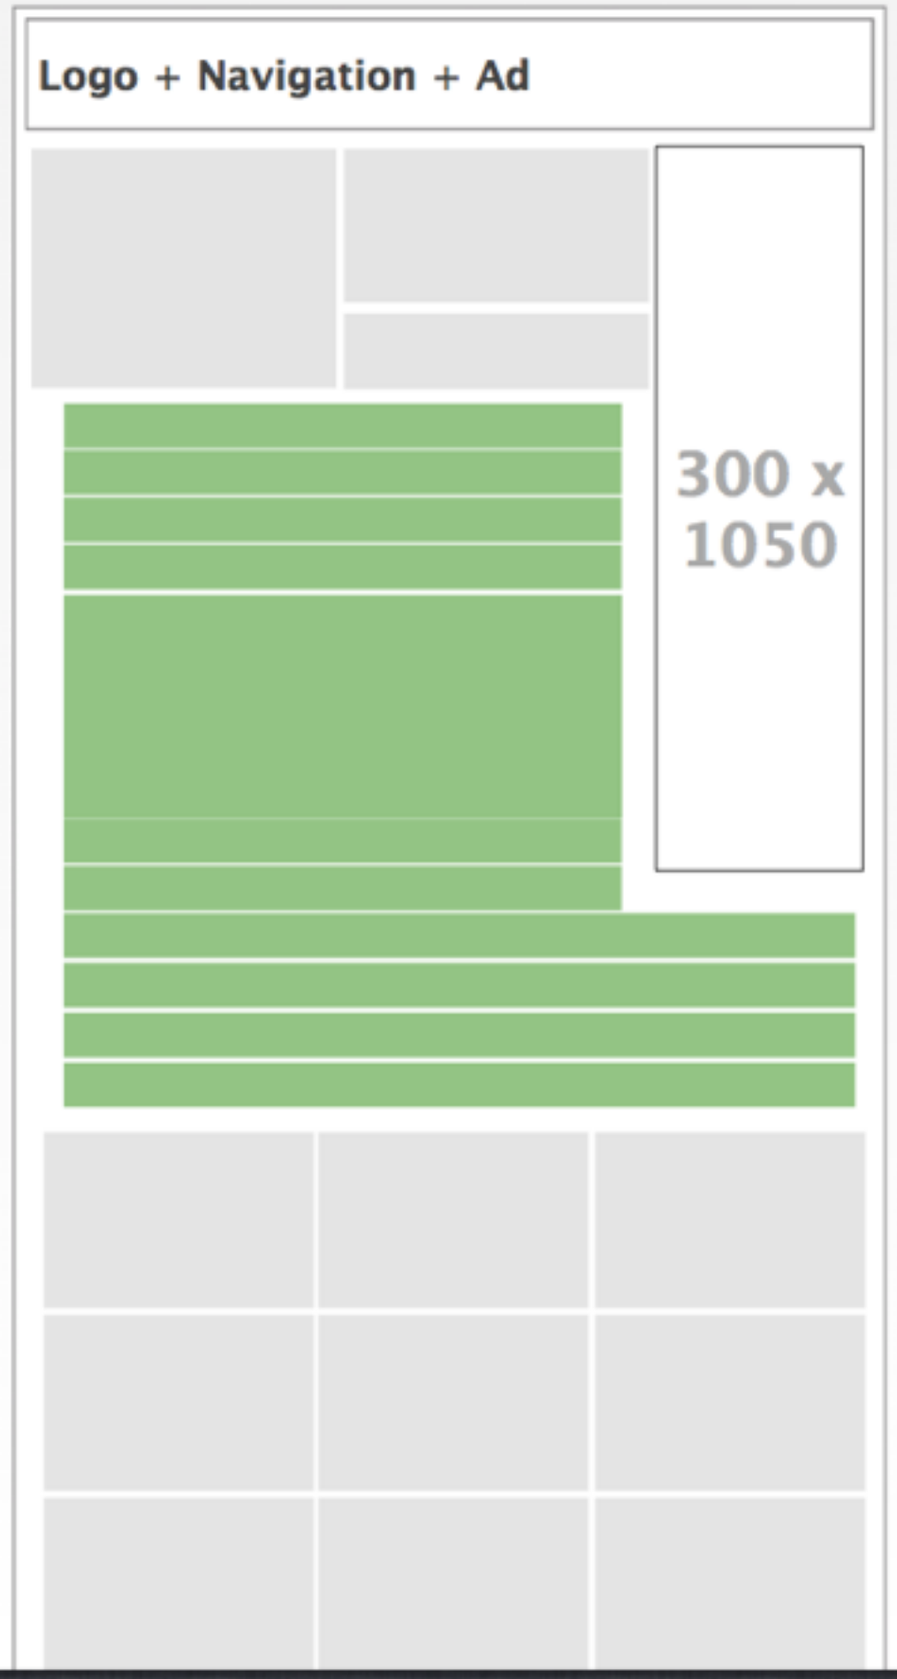
Where
Anchored at the top of Channel, Video, and Event and Homepages.

Who
Curated by the editors.

Live Events

During live events, the Featured Island is replaced by a live video player on the Video, Event, and Homepage.

Site-Wide Patterns: River List



River List

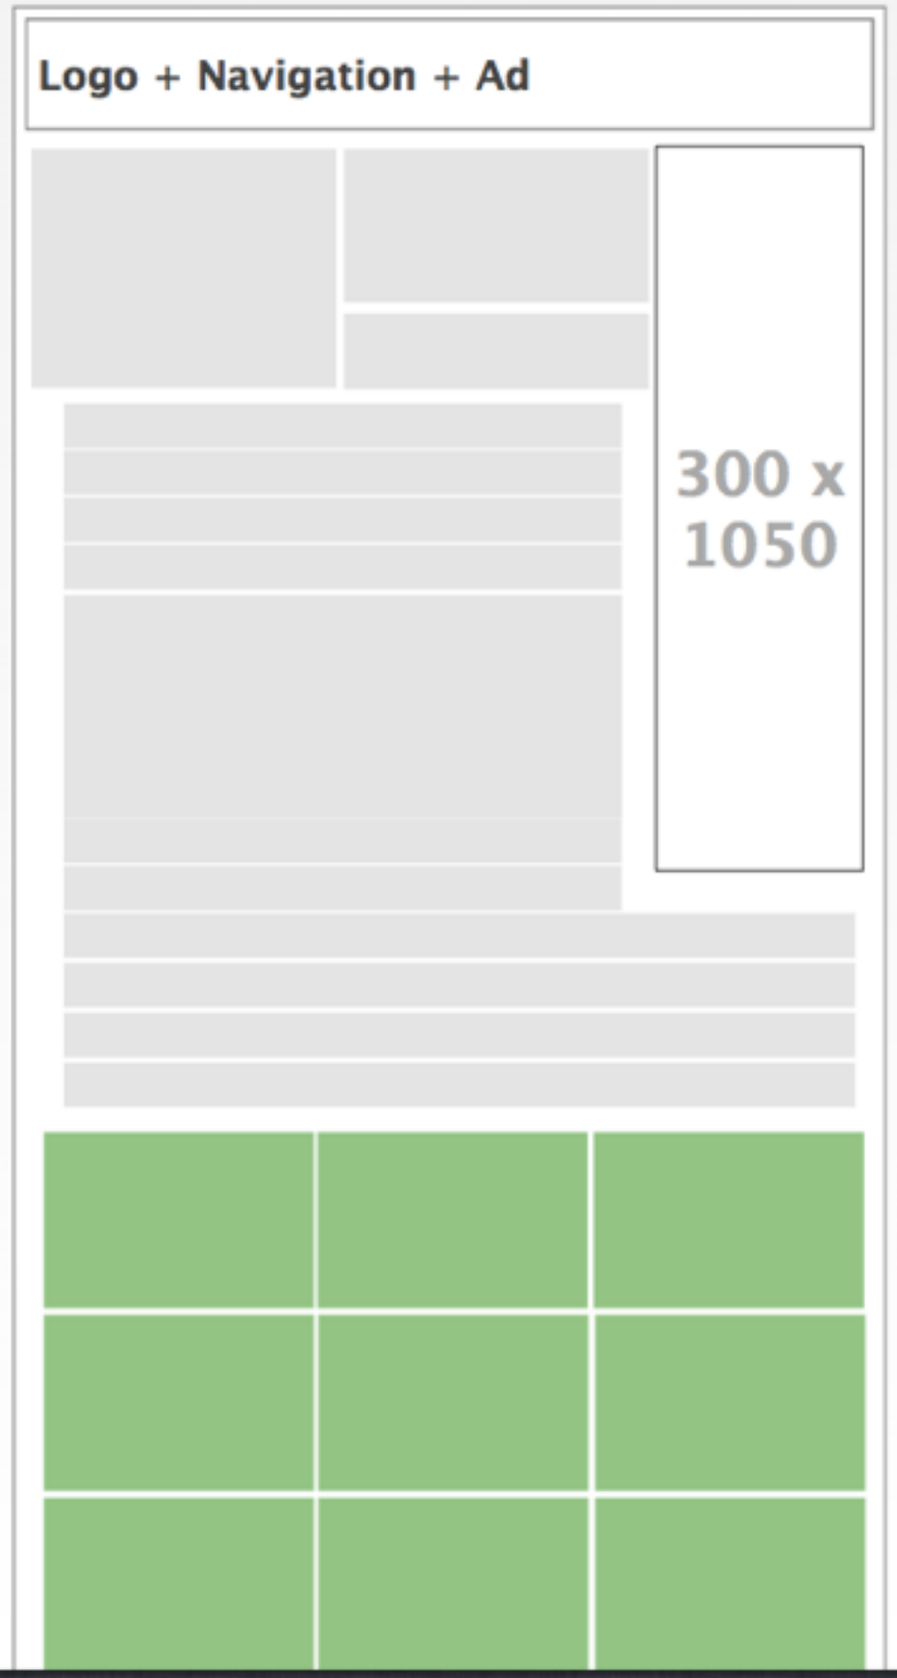
What
The River List is a reverse chronological, highly scannable list of the latest articles. Important or featured articles are marked by editors and will have a slightly different visual treatment. These lists are often sandwiched between islands of featured content, so a single river may contain more than one river list, one flowing into the next list "segment" of the overall river presentation. The number of items in each segment will vary according to how these river elements are combined. We recommend that individual list segments rarely, if ever, contain more than 20 posts.

Where
Seen throughout the site after the featured area or below the River Grid on Channel, and Event and Homepage. Also seen on Topic, Author, and Search Results pages.

Ad Behavior
The River List should wrap around ads. The first headline below the ad should extend under the ad.

De-duplication
We recommend removing posts from the river if they are pinned to any of the islands.

Site-Wide Patterns: River Grid Island



River Grid Island

What
The river grid is a block of content that appears when there are set recurring events and shows or when there is a short list (8–10) of curated items. The grid is typically ordered by recency.

This grid should accommodate video clips, headlines with no images, and headlines with images.

Where
Seen throughout the site including on Events hub, Event archive, Video hub, video index, and elsewhere when appropriate.

Desktop Ad Behavior
When the River Grid is adjacent to an ad, it should wrap around the ad. The next full row without an ad should extend to the full-width of the column.

A paragraph (from the Greek paragraphos, "to write beside" or "written beside") is a self-contained unit of a discourse in writing dealing with a particular point or idea. A paragraph consists of one or more sentences. The start of a paragraph is indicated by beginning on a new line.

Blockquote

> A block quotation (also known as a long quotation or extract) is a quotation in a written document, that is set off from the main text as a paragraph, or block of text, and typically distinguished visually using indentation and a different typeface or smaller size quotation.

Pullquote

> “We're in a unique position to produce content with a much higher level of interactivity”

1. Featured Island
Set by Editors. Can include important stories as well as featured stories. Will become Live Player during events.

2. Ad space
Should accommodate for a 300 x 250 ad that can expand to devil size of 300 x 1050. River should expand and contract to accommodate unit.

3. River List
of posts to be determined in HTML. Goal is to "Improve usability by providing a compact view with minimal scrolling" and "drive users to article".

4. Ad: 125 x 125 (4)

5. Carousel Island
Recommended to place content that has been published in the Featured Article Template here.

6. River List
of posts TBD in HTML

Vimessa Deadpooled, Founders Launch User Retention Service, Userfox, With $700K From Y Combinator, 500 Startups & More

Y Combinator-backed Vimessa launched in late 2011 with a free video voicemail app for the iPhone that allowed users to send high-def video messages to any cell number or email address. The idea was to make video messaging work on any mobile device or desktop. But, despite the early buzz around the product, rules are rules: 90 percent of startups fail.

The Microsoft Surface Pro Proves That The PC Is Back

I come bearing glad tidings. After decades of OEM malaise, a constant parroting of the speeds and feeds mantra, and an aesthetic that was formulated in the back room of a dingy Staples office supply store, the PC is really back.
